... but first a word from our editor

This issue contains another set of varied articles and extracts relating to Jewish life in the former gubernias of Kielce and Radom, with a special section highlighting a single town.

The focus of the majority of the front section in this issue is the town of Łagów ("Lagev", in Yiddish), in Radom gubernia, on the road between Kielce and Opatów. There has been no Yizkor Book published for Łagów, and no extant vital records register. But we have pulled together many diverse articles, translated from Hebrew, Russian, and Polish; some original articles; and data from a variety of sources. We begin with a translation of the Łagów entry from Yad Vashem's Hebrew-language Pinkas HaKehillot, "Encyclopaedia of Jewish Communities". We again thank Yad Vashem for granting permission to translate and publish these excerpts. We thank Yad Vashem also for extracts from their new database of "Pages of Testimony" for Holocaust victims born in Łagów.

Other items about Łagów are the article from the 19th-century Słownik Geograficzny [Geographical Dictionary]; reminiscences by J. B. Salsberg; a transcription of the 1929 Polish Business Directory entries for Łagów; an 1859 community petition to the government; data about Łagów landsmanshaft organizations in Toronto and Chicago; a report on a trip back to Łagów; several maps; notes on the remnants of Łagów's Jewish vital records and references to Łagów residents in other records; reports about the Jewish cemetery; and miscellaneous bibliographical references.

This Łagów section demonstrates the amount of data that one could collect about a small obscure town, with a bit of effort.

Also in this issue are translations of the articles on Kielce and Radom gubernias from the Russian Evreiskaia Entsiklopedia [Jewish Encyclopedia], filled with statistical and demographic information about their Jewish residents; a translation of an article from the Warsaw Jewish Historical Institute's Bulletyn concerning Jewish organizations in our region between the two world wars; and a Robert Heyman essay about surname variations, something we should all be aware of when researching vital records.

The extracts of Jewish vital records from LDS microfilms in this issue include a very large set of births: over 1,700 births from Klimontów, covering 1840-1865, extracted by Ronald Greene. Also included are marriages for Szczekociny, 1847-1865, by Leah Jordan Bisel; and extracts for a "new" town – Staszów – the 1864 Staszów births, extracted by Jean-Pierre Stroweis.

I'd like to take this opportunity to remind people of Jewish Records Indexing-Poland's "Polish State Archives" project, to obtain indexes of non-microfilmed Jewish vital records of the late 19th century. There are still no Archive Coordinators for the seven archives holding the Jewish vital records for towns in Kielce and Radom gubernias. No work will be done at an archive until someone volunteers to be the "Archive Coordinator" for that archive. See page 26 of IV:1 (Winter 2000) issue, and get in touch with JRI-Poland to participate in this important endeavor. At the upcoming 21th International Conference on Jewish Genealogy in London, JRI-Poland will hold workshops on Sunday July 8th to train Archive and Shtetl Coordinators for this project.

Łagów

Special Section on Łagów

by Warren Blatt

In this issue we present a special section on the town of Łagów. About 1,400 Jews lived in Łagów before the Holocaust. There is no Yizkor Book for Łagów, and no extant vital records, so genealogical research on Łagów is difficult. The material we bring together here will hopefully serve as a memorial to the Jewish community of Łagów.

The town of Łagów ("Lagov", "Logif", לָגֹוּבְּ in Yiddish, Лаговъ in Russian) is on the road between Kielce and Opatów, about 20 miles east of Kielce and 15 miles west of Opatów, at 50°47'N 21°05'E.

Before WWI, Łagów was located in Opatów powiat (district) of Radom gubernia (province) of the Kingdom of Poland of the Russian Empire (1867-1917). Between the two world wars (1918-1939), Łagów was in Opatów district of Kielce województwa (province) of the Second Polish Republic; from 1945-1975 in Kielce province of Poland; and from 1976-1998 in Kielce administrative district. Since 1999, Łagów's jurisdiction is the Kielce district of Świętokrzyskie province.

The Jewish population of Łagów was very small – less than 200 persons – until the removal of legal residency restrictions throughout the Kingdom of Poland in 1862. After that time, the Jewish population quickly grew to about 1,200-1,400 persons, and that size remained fairly constant until the Holocaust.

The 7-line article "Лаговъ" (Lagov) in the Russian Еврейская Энциклопедия [Evreiskaia Entsiklopediia = Jewish Encyclopedia] (St. Petersburg: Brokhaus-Efron, 1908-1913), Volume IX, column 958, reads:

Lagov – Settlement in Opatów uezd [district], Radom Gubernia. Since it was classified as a [Roman Catholic] church possession, Lagow had the privilege until 1862 of not allowing Jews to settle on its territory (This privilege is not currently valid). Nonetheless, even by 1856 there were 145 Jews (and 1,186 Christians) registered. In 1897 the total population was 2,440, of which 1,233 were Jews.

Łagów is first mentioned in records from the 11th century as a property owned by the Catholic Church. In the vicinity of the town, a particular form of clay was found that was well suited for the manufacture of porcelain wares.

Łagów was recognized as a minor city in 1253. (It appears that it got lower status rights because the number of inhabitants had not, at that time, reached 486 persons). In 1453, the King of Poland, Kazimierz IV Jagiellon [1427-1492], raised the administrative rank of Łagów and changed it to a full city according to the Magdeburg Law. As such, it was allowed to hold two annual fairs every year. In 1504, the boundaries of Łagów were expanded to include parts of the forest adjacent to it, including the land that had been utilized for the production of clay for the porcelain industry. During this period, Łagów enjoyed strong economic improvement, and a factory was built for the production of glassware.

In 1578, iron ore and lead were discovered in the vicinity and factories were built there which manufactured iron utensils. At that time, there were 47 tradesmen in the city, including four liquor distillers. When the Swedes invaded Poland, in the middle of the 17th century, the combatants passed by Łagów without incident and the city was able to continue its growth and expansion uninterrupted. However, by the end of the 17th century, the city was devastated by a fatal epidemic, which wiped out all but 171 residents. At the beginning of the 18th century, a city revival of sorts began, and once again a few factories were established for the production of porcelain wares. By 1739, the number of annual fairs increased to 10 per year, and many people were attracted to those events from far and wide. At that point, a large inn was built. After the Polish insurrection in 1863, in which many of the citizens of Łagów participated, the Russian authorities closed several factories in the city and the city's standing with the regional governments declined. There remained only a few small factories for the production of fire-resistant porcelain wares. In the year 1869 Łagów's city status was taken away, and even as a part of the independent Republic of Poland after World War I, it remained a provincial industrial town, without official city status.

Until the end of the 19th century, we have no evidence of the existence of an organized Jewish community in Łagów. In 1827, no more than 60 Jews resided there, but from that point their numbers grew continuously – in 1852 the Jewish community numbered 142 people; and by 1921 the population grew to 1,269 people. The Jews of Łagów, as did their brethren in other Polish cities, earned their living from commerce and trades and from participating in the market days and the fairs. They earned their livelihood with difficulty and hard work. In 1903, the newspaper Izraelita published an article on the poverty and difficult existence of the Jews in Łagów, and described the absence of needed help from outside sources. At the beginning of the 20th century, the Jews of Łagów became organized into a community and built a small synagogue. In 1908, a community leadership committee was chosen and they appointed Rabbi Tzvi Dov Rozen, who served as Rabbi in Łagów until 1924. His successor, Rabbi Yissachar Dov Shwartz (died 1937), was the second and also the last Rabbi of Łagów. After him, no other Rabbi was appointed to take on those rabbinic responsibilities.

During the First World War, many of the sources of livelihood for the Jews had disappeared, and many residents were compelled to rely on the regular assistance from the general community fund for the poor. In 1915, a community kitchen was opened in Łagów to feed the large numbers of poor people.

In 1919, at the end of the war, the armies of General [Józef] Haller of the Polish forces passed through Łagów, took advantage of their position to pillage the stores of the Jewish community, and to cut the beards and brutalize passing Jews, thereby causing them intense suffering. Also, in 1922, when a large fire erupted in the town, the Jews were used as a scapegoat and were accused of setting fire to the settlement. The police opened an investigation and concluded that the Jews were innocent of the crime.

In addition, in the later part of that decade, particularly in the days of the economic crisis of the 30's in Poland, a crisis whose effects were also severely felt in Łagów, the Jews suffered more intensely than others in the competition for the ever-shrinking sources of income. There were Jews who left the town, some to bigger cities within Poland, and others to locations outside the country.

However, despite the economic distress and emigration from Łagów, this period in Łagów's history was characterized by an increase in community and political activity. Specifically, the assorted Zionist parties flourished, along with their respective youth movements. There were also those in Łagów who were followers of "Agudath Israel".

In the period between the two World Wars Łagów contained a synagogue, a few prayer houses, shtibelech of Gur and Alexander Chassidism, and a minyan of trades people. The Jewish community in Łagów had no cemetery of its own¹ and the dead were generally taken to nearby communities for burial (principally to Opatów).

During the Second World War

Łagów was conquered by the Germans during the first week of the war [September 1939]. During the fighting in the area, many houses were destroyed. In anticipation of the arrival of the Germans, a group of young Jews escaped to Eastern Poland, which was under Russian occupation. Immediately after their arrival, the Germans began conscripting Jews into forced labor. At the end of 1939, a Judenrat [Jewish council] was established in Łagów and with their help, all of the Jews of the city were taken out of their houses and moved into inferior accommodations in the market area of the town. At first, they continued to be able to leave their homes as before, but in March 1942 the area was closed off and it became a ghetto.

The Germans were not successful in extorting large financial contributions from the Jews of Łagów, because most were miserably poor. Even threats did not help. Even so, the Germans killed hostages, conducted searches in Jewish homes, and looted their insignificant property, but they were unable to find any money. Many young Jews were sent to work camps.

In March 1941, one hundred refugees from Vienna were brought to Łagów, and then in July 1941, another large group of refugees arrived from Radom, barefoot, starving and sick without anything they could call their own. They were housed in the study -house, and in the small synagogue of Łagów. As a result of the congestion and poor sanitary conditions, an epidemic of typhus broke out that killed a significant portion of the town's residents.

As mentioned earlier, in March 1942, the streets of the Jews were fenced with barbed wire and a small gate was built, in order to enclose the ghetto. It was forbidden to leave the ghetto, and anyone who dared to contravene this prohibition was liable to punishment by death. In the spring of 1942, a new wave of evictions of Jews from ghetto to ghetto began in the district of Radom. At that time, there was a reduction in the number of food cards that were distributed to the Jewish workers in the ghetto by about one-sixth, and the famine in the ghetto became more intense.

In July 1942, according to a list that was prepared in advance, the Germans removed 460 young men from the Łagów ghetto to an unknown destination. The Germans claimed that they were sent to a secure place and that they were working there on behalf of the German war effort, but no indication of life was ever received from any of them.

In August 1942, a rumor spread in the ghetto that the Germans were expelling Jews from ghettos in the area to extermination camps. Many began to find for themselves an assorted variety of hiding places. Some turned to farmers in the area to beg for help, but only a few farmers were ready to endanger themselves to assist Jews. In addition, on December 15, 1942, the German head of the Radom district published an order and announced that anyone who gave assistance to Jews would be sentenced to death. Despite that threat, there were Polish individuals who dared to hide Jews and also shared their bread with them. One, Ignacy Bazurski, who used to bring food to many Jewish families from Łagów and even tried to find places for them to hide, was given up to the Gestapo by a Polish accomplice, and was tortured to death in a German prison.

On October 27, 1942², S.S. personnel arrived in Łagów and with them, Ukrainian and Polish police. They broke into the houses and took out all the Jews to the yard beside the Judenrat building. The sick and old were shot in their beds. Many children were shot to death. In the yard in front of the Judenrat building, the Jews were lined up in rows according to their families and from there moved toward the train station. Even on the way to the train station many Jews were shot. Those who survived, about 2,000 in number, were put into wagons soaked with chlorine and were transported to Kielce (q.v.). After a brief stop there, all of them were sent to Treblinka. During this general expulsion from Łagów, the Germans permitted some tens of Jews to remain. Those Jews were put to work to collect and sort the property that the expelled residents had left

"Izraelita" Correspondence

From Łagów in Radom Guberniya the following correspondence has arrived amongst the others:

In our locality, as in many neighboring shtetls, where mostly very poor Jews reside, such a degree of extreme poverty and depression governs, that even the oldest people do not remember such horrible times. The life of Łagów's Jews and of the Jews in the other shtetls is a wretched daily existence.

Probably the only help for those paupers – who with horrible efforts are managing to earn a small piece of bread, barely sufficient to avoid death from starvation – is to become engaged in agricultural work or to move somewhere else.

But even those efforts can not be accomplished without outside assistance, since the residents of Łagów and the similar backward communities can only complain about their situation and suffer with all humility, but they cannot fight, due to the lack of initiative and money. But those outsiders that can take initiative and possess money would not even think about the Yidlakh of Łagów.

For example, if they would at least peep at the shtetls in the deep provinces where the Jewish proletariat is dying from hunger all their life – they could, after all, do so much good. The young generation of those poor beggars is healthy material after all, and from them, in appropriate circumstances, one could develop competent people.

People from Łagów need assistance to resettle and to begin a new life: to educate them, to open their eyes for their daily wretched existence – this is a goal of all Jewish associations, charities and circles, since they do not identify those goals themselves.

Łagów – Article from Słownik Geograficzny

Translated from the Polish by Gordon McDaniel

The 16-volume Słownik Geograficzny Królestwa Polskiego i innych krajów słowiańskich [Geographical Dictionary of the Kingdom of Poland and other Slavic Lands], edited by Filip Sulimierski, et. al. was published in Warszawa between 1880 and 1902. This Polish-language reference work is the best single source for finding general information about places in the Kingdom of Poland. For more information about the Słownik Geograficzny, see the article by William F. Hoffman in Avotaynu XVI:3 (Fall 2000), pages 49-53, or <http://www.pgsa.org/słownik_eng.htm>.

Łagów. Settlement, later town, on the Łagowica River, county and parish of Łagów. It lies on an upland that rises here to 924 feet and constitutes the southern flank of the Łysagór Range, whose Świętokrzyski [Holy Cross] summit is only 7 versts [4.6 miles] distant; Łagów is 23 versts [15½ miles] from Opatów. It lies on the road from Opatów to Kielce. It has a brick parish church, 3 brick chapels, a home for the poor, a 1st-class elementary school, a county court of the 3rd district [okręg], a county office, post office, an oil mill, two water mills and windmill. In 1827 there were 209 houses and 1,299 residents; in 1862, 201 houses and 2,371 residents (including 192 Jews); now it has 212 houses (5 brick), 2,005 residents. The settlement contains 2851 morgs [1 morg = 1.2 acres] of land. The population is engaged in manufacture of earthenware utensils for many years. The vicinity of Łagów yields nonflammable clay and dark marble. Near Łagów is the Zbójecka cave.

Łagów is an old settlement. Władysław Herman, at the intercession of his wife Judyta, donated the property with its attached villages in 1305 to the Kujawa Chapter: "The cathedral of Władysław, and the castel [castellania] of Łagów with its district, I concede in permanent donation", states Długosz [in Latin]. The expression "castellania" indicates that there must have been a castle there, managed by a castellan or administrator of royal property. Elizabeth, Queen of Hungary and Poland, during the incompetent rule of her son Ludwig, owner of the area, cited a privilege issued in Sandomierz in 1375 to the effect that its castellan Zbyluta, the Bishop of Kujawa or Włocław, had raised the village of Łagów to the rank of town; she gave it German Law [an incorporation charter], and established a market on Thursday. King Jagiello, in granting the request of Piotr of Radolin, a doctor of both laws, confirmed the above privilege in 1390. The town experienced a severe loss in 1502, when it was burned by the Tatars. King Stanisław August, for the convenience of the residents, changed 12 annual markets to different days, in 1778. The local church, constructed of stone with a lofty tower, appears to be from the 15th century. Information about its history is lacking, and there is nothing in its interior. Of a second church, also old, in which there was a hospital, there remain only walls. (See Kod. Dypl. Pol. II, 760.) In Łagów was born the scholarly Hebrew writer Jakob Reifman.¹

The parish of Łagów, in the deanery of Opatów, has 6,586 souls. The property of Łagów's wojt [chief officer of a group of villages], a manor farm, entailed estate, has 1 house, 14 residents, 124 morgs. Łagów Poduchowny is a settlement, has 2 houses, 257 morgs. According to the Land Credit Society [Tow. Kred. Ziemi. = Towarzystwo Kredita Ziemskego], the property of Łagów consists of the manor farms of Łagów, Zamość and Wólka Zamojska, the villages of Łagów, Wola Łagowska, Zamość and Floryanów, the extent of which is 1385 morgs. The manor farm of Łagów has 454 morgs of land under cultivation and gardens, 25 morgs of meadow, 9 morgs of pasture, 424 morgs of forest, 25 morgs of fallow land and building plots, for a total of 937 morgs, with 3 buildings of brick and 27 of wood and an 8-field rotation system. The manor farm of Zamość has 126 morgs of land under cultivation and garden, 34 morgs of meadow, 6 morgs of fallow land and building plots for a total of 166 morgs, with 1 building of brick and 9 of wood, with a 6-field rotation system. The manor farm of Wólka Zamojska has 213 morgs under cultivation and garden, 1 morg of meadow, 4 morgs of pasture, 50 morgs of forest, 14 morgs of fallow land and building plots for a total of 282 morgs. There are also an oil mill, windmill and peat area. The village of Łagów has 49 morgs in the settlement, with 746 morgs of fields. The village of Wola Łagowska has 13 morgs in the settlement, 232 morgs of fields. The village of Zamość has 35 morgs in the settlement, 484 morgs of fields. The village of Floryanów has 10 morgs in the settlement, 151 morgs of fields. The county [gmina] of Łagów has 4476 residents, 592 houses and 8427 morgs of land. There are quarries of pottery clay and limestone. To the county of Łagów belong the following: Lechówek, Łagów, Łagowska Wola, Małacentów, Masłowiec, Nowy-Staw, Orłowiny, Paprocice, Sędek, Stawki, Winna and Zamkowa Wola.

¹ Jacob Reifmann was the author of over 50 books. From The Jewish Encyclopedia (Funk & Wagnalls, 1905), Vol. 10, pp. 365-366: "Reifmann, Jacob — Russian author and philosopher, born Apr 7, 1818 at Łagów, near Opatów, Russian Poland, died at Szczepreszyn, Oct 13, 1895. Up to the age of 6 he received instruction in Hebrew from his father, whom circumstances had forced to become a "melamed"; after that age he studied Talmud under different rabbis in Opatów, to which his family had removed from Łagów." — WB.

Growing up in Lagov

Shtetl was steeped in superstition

By J. B. Salsberg

Canadian Jewish News, September 3, 1981

It's an old custom in this corner to make a hasty retreat into the distant past from time to time. Call it escapism, but it is a relief to get away from it all.

So, turn off the radios and the TV boxes and let us return to Lagov, my birthplace.

Lagov was very much like the hundreds of other shtetlech in eastern Europe where, until the early part of the 20th century, the majority of European Jews lived. The shtetlech were, of course, affected by the winds of modernism that blew on the European continent, but essentially, shtetlech like Lagov, before the World War I, were still steeped in superstitions.

In Lagov, for instance, every little Jewish boy knew that there were sheydim (imps, goblins, etc.) that emerged from their hiding places and carried on their nefarious activities during the night. The sheydim lurked in the attics of Jewish homes and they loved to pounce on young girls who forgot to wear their aprons when leaving their homes.

When that happened, mothers would be filled with fear and would leave no stone unturned to protect their young ones. One trained in the art of dispelling the effects of an evil eye would be asked for help. Old Jewish and non-Jewish women who had a reputation for mixing potions for every conceivable emergency would be asked for help. The rabbi of the town would also be consulted and his advice would be scrupulously followed.

— In Lagov we knew that the sheydim would conceal themselves under bridges or in culverts and pounce on horses, causing the beasts to gallop until covered with lather and drop dead. What such an experience did to the passengers in the wagon is too horrible to describe. The frightful experience would often put the victims to bed for days or weeks.

— In my shtetel it was widely believed that sharply at midnight the dead rose from their graves in the Jewish cemetery and find their way (covered in white shrouds, of course) to the synagogue for prayers. It was, therefore, best to keep out of the shul and the area that led from the cemetery to the shul. It was well known in town that so-and-so, who happened to be in front of the shul late one night, saw a departed one in a shroud heading for the shul and he fainted away. Fortunately he was found by the non-Jewish night watchman who alerted the community.

— In Lagov every little boy knew that it was a sin to kill a living thing, but that the prohibition did not apply to the spider. The spider, as is well known, helped in the burning of the holy temple in Jerusalem.

— In my town the peanut was called an "Eretz Yisroel nissele" (nut), because when you gently opened the kernel you found a minute, finely formed head of a bearded man. (Try it when surrounded by little ones in your home.) We called the little figure an "Eretz Yisroel Yiddel".

In Lagov, so my mother told me, there was an occasion when the entire community celebrated a wedding "under the stars," in front of the synagogue at midnight! How come? Here, according to my mother, of blessed memory, was how it came about. A matchmaker arranged a shiduch between the daughter of a "balebatishe" family in Lagov with the son of an equally balebatishe family in another town. As was customary, the boy's family came to the girl's home for the engagement (Tnaim) and this was when the two young people were allowed to meet briefly.

A wedding date was set and the girl's family made elaborate preparations for the event. They even hired a well known musical capella from another city for their daughter's wedding and half the population of Lagov was invited.

But at the appointed hour there was no sign of the groom or his family. The capella did its best to entertain the assemblage. But as the hours passed without a sign of the groom, the bride began to cry. So did her mother, so did a lot of other women... and gloom descended on everyone.

Gossips assured everyone ready to listen that they didn't like the shiduch in the first place and that the groom didn't impress them at all. Slowly and silently the guests and onlookers departed and the home of the bride became like a house of mourning.

Then, near midnight, the groom and his entire entourage arrived in town! What happened?

An axle in one wagon and a wheel in another broke and it took all that time to make the repairs.

The rabbi approved the holding of the ceremony; the capella began playing "under the stars"; all of Lagov was awakened and all of Lagov, even the uninvited ones and even the non-Jews, hastily assembled in front of the shul where the wedding took place.

"What a night that was," said my mother. "No one slept a wink and everyone agreed that the groom was really a lovely young man."

So, my friends, it's getting late and we'd better get home before...

Lagov was progressive town, not backward

By J. B. Salsberg

Canadian Jewish News, September 10, 1981

Hear me, oh you good people whose ancestral roots go back to Lagov! Listen to me, all ye who have compassion for even the humblest of our landsleit!

Free yourselves, I pray, of all anger towards me - one of yourselves, blood of your blood, flesh of your flesh and accept my amends.

Here and now, before the eyes of all the readers of this renowned publication, I proclaim my affection for the ancient Jewish community of Lagov that has been destroyed by the Hitlerites. I publicly atone for any misconception I may have inadvertently given that Lagov was a town steeped in abysmal superstition.

Well, my patient readers, what happened was totally unexpected. Last week's paper no sooner appeared than my uncle Eliezer's telephone became a substitute for the Wailing Wall. It seems that not only the few remaining Lagover originals but many of their children and grandchildren, who had never seen Lagov but had heard it described in technicolor, felt mortally wounded by what I wrote last week. "He has given Lagov a black eye," one complained to my uncle.

So I declare: Lagov was no more superstitions than were all other shtetlach at that time and far less so than many other shtetlach in the general vicinity. In fact, Lagov was darned progressive.

How can one think of Lagov as a backward community when one can tell the following about it?

Before World War I, before my family left for Canada, an uncle of mine was already singing Eliakum Tzunser's the "Soche" (the plow), as the instrument for a Jewish agrarian life in Eretz Yisroel.

Yosel (I can't recall his surname) was so far out in his untraditional method of teaching that his cheder (school) paid little attention to Gemara (Talmud) but concentrated on the Prophets. He was my last rebbe in Lagov. To emphasize his radical methods, he shocked Lagov by giving his limited number of pupils a recess twice a day and he got them back to the classroom with the ringing, of a tiny bell. It was a revolution!

Lagov, before we left, already had a few subscribers to the "Freind," a Yiddish daily.

Another proof of Lagov's modernism, while I was still there, was the existence of two tiny "ice cream parlors" that served no ice cream, because there was none to be had, but did serve "zode vasser" (carbonated water) with and without fruit juices and they offered pitifully small collections of sweets. One of the two entrepreneurs was the possessor of the only phonograph (horn and everything) in town, and on a balmy summer evening the dark marketplace was enlivened by the popular Yiddish song: "Hot a Yid a veibe" ("What a wife a Jew has").

I recall my mother singing about Noah and his Ark. It was as heartrending as it was instructive. It related how the sinners scoffed at Noah when he urged them to desist from their sinful ways and when he began building the Ark. But when the flood waters rose, those same sinners appealed to Noah: "Oy, du Noach, hob rachmones, loz undz in der teive (ark) arein" ("Oh, you Noah, have pity, let us into the ark"). But Noah replied: "Avek rashoim mit eire chatoim; ihr vet in teive nisht arein!" ("Away evil-doers with your sins; you will not go into the ark").

If that wasn't a sign of modernism, what was?

During my last summer in Lagov, Banim, the rabbi's son-in-law, and a couple of his friends who were singed by modernism, equipped themselves with colored pieces of glass and gathered secretly in my grandfather's orchard to observe an eclipse of the moon. (Together with a couple of my cheder friends I came upon them quite by accident while we were out for some unripe apples.)

Then there was Motel the butcher and his kaloshen (ankle high rubbers). Only because one wanted to keep up with new forms of living could one bring himself to buy a pair of kaloshen in Lagov. In dry weather one didn't need them. When it rained or snowed one was likely to lose the rubbers in the mud or snow. But there were a few who, nevertheless, demonstrated their modernism by buying rubbers. Motel the butcher was one of them.

Motel's rubbers were never sullied by mud or snow. He put them on only on a sunny, Sabbath afternoon as if they were slippers. On such occasions Motel stood proudly in front of his place, adjusted his position to get the maximum reflection of the sun on his rubbers and, swaying from side to side, Motel beamed at his rubbers.

And then there was my much adored grandmother, Miriam Shevah. She spoke to her children and grandchildren in Yiddish, of course. But her Yiddish was sprinkled with Polish, French and Aramaic words that I sorted out only many, many years later. - But she deserves and she will receive the special attention and treatment that she deserved.

For now I close with the hope that all Lagover, here and elsewhere in the world, will be conciliated and will join me in singing the praises of our vanished Lagov. Amen.

J. B. Salsberg was born in Łagów in 1902, and arrived in Toronto with his family at age 11. He wrote a weekly column for Canadian Jewish News for many years, including stories of "the small typical Polish-Yiddish shtetl where I was born". Excerpts of other articles on Lagov by J.B. Salsberg appeared in Vol. I, No. 4.

A Petition from the Łagów Jewish Community, 1859

Translated from the Polish by Peter Jassem

At the Archiwum Główne Akt Dawnych [AGAD] in Warsaw, the Main Archives of Historical Records, among the vast papers of the “Komisja Rządowa Spraw Wewnętrznych i Duchownych” [K.R.S.W.i D.] collection [“The Government Commission of Internal and Religious Affairs”], the following pieces of handwritten correspondence regarding Łagów were found. Document #2112/8693, pages 105-110.

The first letter, dated Feb. 21 / Mar. 5, 1859 [Julian/Gregorian calendar dates], is addressed to “His Excellence Chief Director and President of The Government Commission of Internal and Religious Affairs”. The senders are “(Jewish) parish members of Opatów District in Radom Gubernia” and subject of the letter is regarding “including back some of adjacent villages and towns to the Mosaic Faith [i.e. Jewish] Parish of Raków, for the reasons as follows”.

“As long as the Raków Jewish Congregation has existed, the villages of Mędrów, Cisów, Ocieszki, Napęków, Makoszyn, Huta Nowa, Piórków [these villages are all located within a 10-mile radius of Łagów], the town of Łagów and others have belonged to this congregation of Raków as far as religious activities (rites) are concerned, and we participated in them with great convenience.

These communities were separated from Raków Congregation by a government decree of 1843 and attached to the distant synagogue of Opatów. The undersigned experience great inconvenience as far as observing their religious duties because according to Mosaic faith on some holidays we have to pray at graves of family members, which due to attachment to another parish we are unable to continue doing. Also the Jews from the communities listed above, located near Raków, have to travel far to Opatów, which is tiresome and expensive. In addition it happens that bodies of persons deceased after long and serious illness, according to the existing regulations, are kept in place for three days, and then on very hot days have to be transported to 30 versts [~20 miles] away Opatów, which is a great health risk of spread of dangerous disease due to decay, and sometimes holidays and Sabbath days are violated as we have to travel through Raków and Iwaniska against our religion, and we have to travel through uninhabited areas and forests, since due to the fear of epidemic, the local authorities of villages and towns make it hard to pass through. Previously in 1853 we sent petitions to the Radom Gubernia Authorities asking to incorporate us into the town of Raków’s synagogue congregation, and as a result we filed required protocol declarations on Oct. 24 / Nov. 8, 1853. And now the parishioners of Jewish faith having learned that the Commission of Interior and Spiritual Affairs has refused our petition on the grounds that current status quo is required for the purpose of military conscription, although the fact is that our religious duties would not inconvenience the conscription, registration or taxation activities. For these reasons we have to beg your Magnificence General Director of the Government Commission of Interior and Spiritual affairs, as a caring authority, to look at our difficult situation as far as practicing our faith is concerned and the good of Jews living in the communities of Mędrów, Cisów, Ocieszki, Napęków, Makoszyn, Huta Nowa, Piórków and town of Łagów in the administrative district [powiat] Opatów, attach them for good to Raków (synagogue district) in administrative district [powiat] of Sandomierz. We remain in sweet hope that our petition will be accepted. With great respect in the name all interested, [Signatures of] Herszel Sztajn, Szulim Podstolski, J... Brauman. Mędrów, Feb. 28 1859.”

The Response letter:

From: K. R. S. W. i Dch. [“Komisja Rządowa Spraw Wewnętrznych i Duchownych”]
Warszawa, 18/30 May 1859, in response to correspondence 2112/8693.
To: the Jew Herszel Sztain of Mędrów, administrative district of Raków.

“In response to the application of Herszel Sztain filed on behalf of inhabitants of Mędrów, Cisów, Ocieszki, Napęków, Makoszyn, Huta Nowa, Piórków and the town of Łagów on Feb. 28 1859 to director general of K.R.S.W.i.D. regarding separation from Opatów synagogue district and inclusion in Raków synagogue district being closer, the Commission declares that the Radom Gubernia Government has already declared on 16/28 January 1857 that this request cannot be met because these communities and the town of Łagów are located in the administrative district [powiat] of Opatów, while the town of Raków is located in the administrative district of Sandomierz. Inclusion of these communities in a synagogue district located in another administrative district would cause disorder in enforcing administrative, police and military regulations, and this is why when the synagogue districts were regulated in 1822 they were to be limited by the administrative district [powiat] borders.”

[Signatures, dated 5/21/59, 5/26/59, 5/28/59].

“Pages of Testimony” from Yad Vashem’s Hall of Names

Presented below are extracts from “Pages of Testimony” for Holocaust victims born in Łagów, from Yad Vashem’s Hall of Names database. Each line of data comes from one “Page of Testimony” [in Hebrew: “Daf Ed”], filled out by survivors and other family members. These extracts were transcribed and transliterated from handwritten pages in many languages, so there will be inconsistencies in spelling, and there may be errors present in these transcriptions.

Łagów Vital Records

No vital records specifically for Łagów have survived – they were all presumably destroyed when the Germans bombed the Łagów town hall during WWII. However, there are birth, marriage and death registrations for some Jewish residents of Łagów in the mid-19th-century Jewish civil registers of the nearby town of Opatów. When the Łagów Jewish community was small, they apparently registered their vital events in Opatów. But it is not yet clear if these are all of the registrations for Łagów – At some point Łagów presumably had its own Jewish civil registers, after it began growing in the 1860s. More investigation into the Jewish civil registers of Opatów is needed to determine when Łagów began its own register.

Microfilms of the Jewish civil register of Opatów are available for 1831-1884, on 7 LDS microfilms: #809,163-165 and #1,808,844-847. Extracts of some of these records have been published in the Kielce-Radom SIG Journal: The Opatów marriages for 1855-1862 appeared in I:4 (Autumn 1997), pages 41-52.

Lagower Landsmanshaft in Chicago

From Bridges to an American Society: A Guide to Chicago's Landsmanshaftn 1870-1990, by Sidney Sorkin (Peter Lang, 1993), pages 207-208:

Lagower Aid Society (Poland). Founded 1934. Incorporated January 7, 1935.

Lagower Aid Society Cemetery Association. Incorporated August 16, 1935

Cemetery: Menorah Gardens; Sexton, Lebovitz & Co., Inc.

References: American Jewish Congress Yearbook 1939; Piser Guide; Hyman L. Meites, History of the Jews in Chicago (Chicago JHS, 1990); Landsmanshaften Questionnaire.

The Lagower Aid Society was organized in 1931, officially founded in 1934 and incorporated in 1935. Seven months later, on August 16, 1935, the Cemetery Association was chartered.

A meeting was held on the first Sunday in August 1980, in the Workmen's Circle Vladick Center, at 6500 North California Avenue, and it was a modified version of a picnic, merely held indoors. One of the featured guests of the party was Mr. Joseph Roter, who was the first president and now a resident of Israel. He was the guest of honor. It was almost like a family reunion. Some of the information garnered at that time follows:

The Society does not support its landsmen in Israel, only direct support to Israel.

They had their last banquet on November 18, 1981, in Chicago.

There is a large group a Lagower landsleit in Toronto, Canada.

A large part of their current membership consists of children of the original immigrant members. These children are now 40, 50, and 60 years old. They also had other forms of fund-raisers such as an annual fish boil at the Sovereign Hotel.

Their meetings were held at the Workmen's Circle building until it was sold.

They have moved their meeting place to "What's Cooking", a restaurant in the Lincoln Village Plaza, Chicago.

Joseph Zemel, A. Goldzweig, Nathan Klein, Philip Cooper and Sol Roter were men who signed the incorporation papers. Sam Roter, Nathan Klein, Joseph Roter, Morris Shabelman, Sol Roter and Philip Cooper were the men who organized the Cemetery Association.

Mollie Silver, Haskel Roter and Annie Klein completed the Landsmanshaft Questionnaire September 6, 1981. While they were discussing the verein [organization], it became apparent that the members were almost like a family. This town, which is in the province of Radom, near Warsaw, was like one big extended family. The original purpose of the verein was to help landsleit, especially during the 20 years between the two World Wars. Most of the members came to America after WWI, and thus were directly acquainted with the conditions over there.

By 1940 the Lagower Aid Society had been dissolved by the state, but still continued to function. Al Hirsch, who was one of the organizers, was not listed on the charter.

Yossel Roter was the first president of the Society, and attended the meeting in 1981 over which his son, Haskel Roter, presided. The elder Mr. Roter was 98 years old at the time. The other officers at the meeting were Helen Diner, vice-president, Joseph Spiegel, recording secretary, and Jack Baumgartner, treasurer.

At its peak its membership reached 60 but its current membership is approximately 20. Only 18 attended the meeting in September of 1981. Originally, the dues were $5.00 per year. They are now $10.00. The verein has never issued a monthly bulletin or had a yearly adbook. It still holds monthly meetings but does not hold executive meetings. There were annual picnics until about 1970. Special anniversaries were celebrated at the annual meetings. Sometimes holidays such as Purim and Chanukah were celebrated. One important function, the fund for the needy, is still operative. The sick committee still makes visits and reports.

The organization faces a common problem with its cemetery. One third of the lots have not been sold and for a large portion of those sold, either empty or occupied, payment for their upkeep is not forthcoming.

A Visit to Lagow – May 14, 1996

Jerome Hershman

My father grew up in Lagow. My mother was born there but left it when she was only 4 years old. Although my father hated it and told me little about it, other than that it was poor, I was always curious about what it looked like and what life there was like before 1920 when he came to Chicago to join his older sister, Rose. When I was invited to a medical meeting in Warsaw, I decided I would visit Lagow. I engaged a guide, Darius Kuzniar, an ambitious young man who was an excellent translator and guide. He showed me and my younger cousin, Robert, around Kraków. We also visited Auschwitz, where I tried without success to look up family members, because all but one of my father's large family who remained in Poland were killed in the Holocaust.

We drove northwest from Kraków on E7, then took E23 around the west end of Kielce, then east about 30 minutes to Lagow. In contrast with the richer farming communities we passed north of Kraków, the farms around Lagow looked poor. The town square is rectangular with a large Catholic church on the north end with a new cupola on it and a small scraggly park near the middle of the square. There are old one-story stores around the square, poor shops on the east, very little merchandise, and almost no commercial activity.

We went to the town hall, up a flight of stairs over some shops, and met the Assistant Mayor and three clerks. They told us that all of the records were destroyed by the Nazis during the occupation of the town, a consistent story we heard later. Although I assured them that I was not there to reclaim property, they were not convinced of this. Why would I come there? I learned nothing about my relatives or about the town during the first part of the century.

A woman in the square in her 60's said she knew a Yankele, my grandfather's name, and that he had three daughters, but this Yankele's surname was Cooperman, not Hershman. My grandfather had two daughters and three sons. Yankele Cooperman organized resistance against the Nazis and was shot.

We met another woman, Mary Olendrova, age 82, widowed and lonely because her daughter died at age nine. She asked us to come to her house on the west side of the town past some poor houses. Another man led us there, opened the locked gate by climbing over it. The house was a farmhouse, quite run down, and she offered us tea. She said that she went to school with Jews and that everyone got along fine.

In the afternoon, we met with the village priest who has been there only one year. He was proud of the new construction on the parish church. He assured us that all of the records were destroyed during the war and showed us the church records which had only a few pages that had been reconstructed to describe the initial events of the church history, and were written in the 50's or later.

Though Mary we met Jerry Kowalik, whose uncle was named a righteous gentile in Israel. He saved a wealthy family named Fefferman and was given some of their property after the war. Kowalik's children had moved to Australia.

After lunch at a roadside café outside of town, we looked for the Jewish cemetery, now a grove of poplar trees with some refuse near it. There were no tombstones, and we could not find the plaque commemorating it that my cousin had seen in an earlier visit. Jerry Kowalik told us that the tombstones were removed in 1946 by "communists" who took them to another town for construction material.

In June, 1942, Lagow was surrounded by Nazis. Jews were herded into a central area, and a ghetto with over 2000 people was set up that included Jews from neighboring towns. Survival was barely possible. At night, enterprising Jews could sneak out of the ghetto, go to neighboring farm to barter for food. On October 7, the Jews were marched to Kielce, then transported to Treblinka where they were killed. Lagow was on the war's front, and the townspeople abandoned it because there was heavy shelling. When they returned, the Germans were gone. The synagogue had been damaged by the shelling, and years later fell apart. All of the records were destroyed by the Germans.

Later in the afternoon, I decided to video the buildings around the square, including the small wooden building at the corner of Iwaniska street that was built on the site of the synagogue. On this south part of the square, there were two taverns and drunken men emerged. When two of them made threatening gestures, I decided it was time to leave quickly. We had overstayed our welcome.

In Kraków the next day I found a book written in 1992 by Adam Penkalla, which had brief summaries of the shtetl demography, including a page on Lagow. In 1787, 9 Jews lived with Polish Catholics. In 1827, Lagow had 60 Jews, 4.5% of the population. In 1921, there were 1,269 Jews, 50% of the population, and in 1939, there were 1,400 Jews. Today Lagow has a population of 1,617 people. It has never been repopulated after its Jewish population was wiped out by the Nazis.

My diary contains this impression of Lagow: "All of the Jewish presence is gone, wiped out by the Nazis and the Poles. It is a poor village, little to do, poor economy. Drunkenness prevails. There are many nice Poles in it, but their concern with Jewish visitors is that the Jews will reclaim their houses on the square. The memory of the Jews is fading rapidly. Still I think there was not any future for Jews in Lagow."

Going there gave me the idea of the geography, but the absence now of a bustling lively community of Jews makes the present situation an inauthentic copy of old Lagow. Since the war, without its Jews, Lagow has not redeveloped. As my father said, it was a place to leave and never to return.

Lagów's Jewish Cemetery

Survey Report by the U.S. Commission for the Preservation of America's Heritage Abroad:

USComm. no. POCE000290

< <http://www.preservationcommission.org/plrep.html> >

Lagów is located in Kielce province. Cemetery location: agricultural location between road for Kielce and Pucki. The town is 37 km from Kielce. Present town population is 1,000-5,000; no Jews.

Town official: Wojt. Gminy Łagów, 27-430 Łagów, Kole Staszowa, ul. Rynek 52, tel. 41. Local authority: Wojewódzki Konserwator Zabytków, ul. IX Wieków Kielc 3, Kielce, tel. 45634.

The earliest known Jewish community in town was in 1878. Jewish population in 1929 was 1,269 (50.2%). The Jewish cemetery was established in 1867; last burial in 1942.

Cemetery location: rural (agricultural), on flat land, isolated. No sign or marker. It is reached by turning directly off a public road and is open to all. No wall or gate. The size of the cemetery before WWII was possibly approx. 10.5 hectares; now it is 0.5 hectares. There are no gravestones, structures, or mass graves in the cemetery. Present owner of the cemetery property is the municipality. It is used as a Jewish cemetery only. Properties adjacent to the cemetery are agricultural. The cemetery boundaries are smaller than in 1939 due to agriculture. The cemetery is rarely visited by private visitors.

The cemetery was vandalized during WWII, but not in the last 10 years. There has been no maintenance or care. Security, erosion, and pollution are moderate threats to the cemetery.

The site was visited by and this survey was completed by Dr. Adam Penkalla.

- Files in the Jewish Historical Institute’s Archives in Warsaw indicate that there were about 1,400 Jews in Łagów on the eve of the war. As of 1 January 1942, the Łagów Judenrat reported a Jewish population of 1,985, including refugees from Vienna, Łódź, Kielce, Radom, Aleksandrów and smaller villages in the region. The Judenrat sought and received limited assistance for these refugees from the American Jewish Joint Distribution Committee [AJDC] until the US entry into the war, and then indirectly from the Joint through the Jewish Self-Help Association [ZSS]. Surname Variation in early 19th century Olkusz

by Robert Heyman

It is well known that there were numerous Jewish surname changes in the Kielce gubernia in the early 1820s. Some are clear; some are a bit subtler. If this weren't confusing enough, I would like to present here an argument that surname variations occurred prior to the beginning of civil record keeping in 1810.

A ggggg-aunt of mine in Olkusz was named Ewa EICHENWALD. She married Moyzesz SZTERNER. Moyzesz appears in the whole span of Olkusz Jewish vital records, from the birth of a daughter Sara in 1810, to his death in 1870. Akt #81 in the 1817 births [see the 1810-1825 Olkusz Jewish birth extracts in Kielce-Radom SIG Journal, I:2 (Spring 1997), pages 40-44] records the birth of a son Herszl Dawid to Moyzesz and Ewa. Moyzesz's surname here was originally listed as SZTATLER, but it was crossed out, and SZTERNER written in its place. Ordinarily, I would just regard this as a simple error – such errors occur all too frequently.

However, Akt #163 in the 1819 births records the birth of a daughter Mindla to Moyzesz and Ewa, however the surname is listed as SZTATLER, rather than SZTERNER. This time the surname was not crossed out. Clearly this was another error. But the same error occurring twice made me a little suspicious. I decided to investigate further.

Akt #8 in the 1870 deaths records the death of Moyzesz SZTERNER, and lists his parents as Wolf and Mindla. SZTATLER was quite a large family in Olkusz, and the patriarch happened to be named Wolf. I researched further what I knew about Wolf and Mindla.

Akt #83 in the 1818 deaths [see the 1810-1825 Olkusz Jewish marriage and death extracts in the Kielce-Radom SIG Journal, V:1(Winter 2001), pages 62-67] records the death of Mindla bat Szmul, wife of Wolf SZTATLER. This fits with Moyzesz naming his first daughter born after this event Mindla. Additionally, Moyzesz named a son Szmul, whose death is recorded as 1822 death Akt #89, at the age of 15.

We further find in Akt #143 of the 1821 marriages, that Wolf SZTATLER of Będzin married a second time, and his first wife is identified as Mindla bat Szmul. Wolf's parents were identified as Dawid and Frymet. We have already noted Moyzesz naming a child Dawid. There is no evidence of Moyzesz having a daughter named Frymet. However, it is definite that the first child or children were born before civil record keeping began in 1810, so some children's births will not be in the civil records.

We note that Akt #8 in the 1843 deaths records the death of Wolf SZTATLER, and search for descendants of Moyzesz named Wolf.

Moyzesz's last son was born in 1829, and he did not name any of his sons Wolf. The records identify ten children of Moyzesz and Ewa. Five died young. One more married and moved out of town, and I do not have any further records of that child. However, the remaining four married, and had children in Olkusz. All of these four individuals named their first son born after 1843 (the death of Wolf SZTATLER) Wolf.

Bare extracts were unlikely to have uncovered these clues. The lesson here is that sometimes it is necessary to go beyond the extracts and actually construct the family.

This completed my research into the clues of the identity of Moyzesz SZTERNER's father. I leave it for readers to draw their own conclusion, but it is my contention that a father-son relationship existed between Wolf SZTATLER and Moyzesz SZTERNER.

Jewish Organizations in Kielce Province (1918-1939)

An article from Bulletyn Żydowskiego Instytutu Historycznego

BŻIH No. #169-171 (1994), pages 55-84

Translated from the Polish by Gwido Zlatkes

In the years 1922-1932, various forms of social activity in the Kielce województwa [voivodship = province] grew rapidly, including Jewish organizations. Ten Jewish associations existed before 1918. Among the oldest in the 20th century was the Jewish Music Society in Dąbrowa Górnica, chartered by the authorities on February 17, 1900.¹ In Kielce, two charity associations had charters. One of them was the Association for Poor Sick Jews, “Linas Hacedek”, registered by the Russian authorities on April 29, 1914; another was the Association for Providing Care to Poor Jews “Machrykaj Hades” chartered on September 13, 1918, number 218.² There also were: the Association for Providing Care to Poor Jews “Hachnusas-Orchim” in Częstochowa (chartered on January 12, 1911), the Association “Linas Hacedek” in Radom (chartered on April 7, 1910)³ the Jewish Gymnastic and Sport Association “Hakoakh” in Będzin (chartered on May 7, 1914, no. 692) and the Town Library Jewish Association “Najmód Kochimuch” in Busko (chartered on December 10, 1917).⁴

After Poland regained independence, the economic and social situation significantly improved. This is particularly evident after 1921, when both the Polish population and the minorities could maintain rich social and cultural life in Poland. These rights were confirmed in the Constitution of the Polish Republic of March 17, 1921. Its article 108 stated that all citizens had the right to unite and assemble, and to create associations and unions.⁵ This applied to the national minorities as well because “every citizen has the right to preserve his nationality and cultivate his language and national character.”⁶

The rights acquired on the basis of the constitution influenced the growth of social activity, and prompted the creation of institutions that acquired legal status. According to article 110 of the Constitution, Polish citizens who belonged to national, religious or linguistic minorities also had “an equal right with other citizens to establish, supervise and control, at their own expense, charitable, religious and social institutions, as well as schools and other educational institutions.”⁷

The Jewish population took a great interest in culture, education, religion and social life, regardless of the political and social situation in Poland. Jews created many social organizations, which gathered people of different political and social views. Many forms of activity were also present in Kielce voivodship⁸ inhabited by 9.1% of the population of Poland.⁹ This voivodship was among the largest in Poland in terms of territory, and included 16 powiaty (districts). Seven of them formerly belonged to Kielce gubernia (province): Jędrzejów, Kielce, Miechów, Olkusz, Pińczów, Stopnica and Włoszczowa; another seven to the former Radom gubernia: Ilża, Końskie, Kozienice, Opatów, Opoczno, Radom and Sandomierz; and two from the former Piotrków gubernia: Będzin and Częstochowa.¹⁰

The 1920s and 1930s brought a rapid development of many associations and unions. Cultural-educational associations spread Jewish culture and helped in developing various cultural and educational institutions.¹¹ These associations were entitled to "create institutions for artistic, cultural and educational purposes, such as libraries, theaters, publishers, museums of arts and science, exemplary institutions for educational purposes, etc."¹² schools and spread education and proper upbringing, including religion, vocations and sports.¹³ The statistics in the accompanying chart testify to these activities.

Out of 217 Jewish associations chartered in 1921-1928 in Kielce voivodship, 44.7% were charitable associations, 23.96% cultural-educational, and 11.05% were sports-related. Charitable organizations were often created in small towns and villages, where a large majority of Jews lived in poverty.¹⁴

A large number of charitable organizations, whose purpose was constant help to the poorest Jews, was established in the Kielce voivodship in the 1920s. They have various characteristics and goals. Their statutes included helping people in difficult situations. Among the most useful and best developed with a large membership were the charity associations named Linas HaCedek, Gemilus Chesed, Bikar Cholim, and others.

Educational associations also played a great role. Their goal was to promote and build Jewish

In the subsequent years the number of organizations chartered greatly increased, especially in the years 1929-1932. But in the later period only a few new associations were chartered. Some of the existing organizations either suspended their activities or dissolved altogether.¹⁵

In general, almost all localities in Kielce voivodship had at least one association. Jewish associations were most numerous in the city of Kielce (28 different organizations, i.e. 8.0%), Radom with 24 organizations (6.9%), Częstochowa – 20 (5.7%), Sosnowiec – 19 (5.5%), Będzin – 16 (4.5%). Smaller population centers had much smaller numbers of organizations.

The greatest number among the chartered associations were charitable (48.2%), cultural-educational (23.4%) artisan (9.5%) and sport (9.24%).¹⁶

Comparing the numbers for 1921-1928 with those for 1920-1939, we see that the number of charitable organizations increased whereas the number of cultural-educational and sports decreased.

Association and unions brought together the Jewish population in 94 localities in Kielce voivodship.¹⁷ In particular years their number varied, and to a large extent it depended on local needs. These forms of officially registered activity looked as follows:

To sum up this data, we must note that the activity of these associations had a great impact on the life of the population. They enabled the Jews to meet their needs and brought large-scale help. The economic crisis of 1929-1933, with its large unemployment and the lack of financing caused by the general political situation, prevented the growth of charitable, workers', sports, and cultural-educational organizations. Many of them had to limit or suspend their activities. These associations greatly contributed in the development of the intellectual, cultural, and public life of their localities.

From Evreiskaia Entsiklopedia

Translated from the Russian by Gordon McDaniel

The 16-volume Еврейская Энциклопедия [Evreiskaia Entsiklopediia = Jewish Encyclopedia] published in St. Petersburg (Brokhaus-Efron, 1908-1913) contains articles on all aspects of Jewish life in the Russian Empire. Translated here are the articles for the cities of Radom and Kielce, and the gubernias of Radom and Kielce. The gubernia articles are accompanied by many statistical tables based upon the 1897 Imperial Census.

Radom – During the period of the Rzecz Pospolita [Republic of Poland, before the partition of 1795], Radom was the capital city of the district [powiat] of the same name, which was part of the Województwo of Sandomierz. Radom was known from 1613 as the seat of the Skarbow Tribunal, with which representatives of the “Council of Four Lands” [“Va’ad Arba Arazot”] were in constant contact. In the 1765 census, there were 67 Jews in Radom. In accordance with the lustration [survey] of 1789, Jewish kosher butchers paid 512 zloty [plechkov]. The surveyors noted that there were no traders in Radom other than a Jew who owned a grocer’s shop at court, and who paid 800 zlotys. References: Baliński & Lipiński, Starożytna Polska, [Ancient Poland, 1845], s.v.; Census [Liczba] of 1765, in Archiwum Komisji historycznej, VIII.

At the present, Radom is the capital city of a gubernia. According to official documents, Radom held the privilege of King Augustus II, dated 28 November 1724 of “de non tolerandis judaeis”; on the basis of this document, the residents of the city sent a petition to the king in 1743 to prevent the mayor [starosta] from settling Jews in the city; consequently, a decision of the Royal Commissary Court was issued on 10 January 1746 that required removing the Jews immediately and preventing their settlement in perpetuity. Later, the mayor and residents came to an agreement, and the mayor obtained permission to settle five Jews under his jurisdiction. The temporary Supreme Council of the Duchy of Warsaw made a decision in 1814 to create a Jewish quarter, as a consequence of which Jews resided on Walowa street, outside the earlier walls of the city. According to data from 1856, there were 6,546 Christians and 1,495 Jews (manuscript material). In 1862, the privilege lost force. In the census of 1897 there were 146,000 residents in the district [uezd], including 20,930 Jews; the city of Radom had 29,896 residents, including 11,277 Jews.

In places in the district with at least 500 residents, Jews were represented in the largest numbers in the following: Białołęki, 2,307 residents, 1,534 Jews; Wierzbica, 1,429 and 297; Wolanów, 491 and 333; Wyśmierzice, 1,454 and 220; Glinice, 2,092 and 411; Jedlińsk, 1,361 and 622; Pryztyk 1,802 and 1,504; Skaryszew, 1,756 and 775; Stromiec 880 and 174; Jastrząb, 623 and 113. Of Radom rabbis, the names of Samuil Mogilewer and Avraam Tzvi Perlmutter should be mentioned.

Kielce – a gubernia capital city. Kielce did not have a special privilege that would have prevented Jews from settling in the city. However, since the privilege of King Sigismund I stated: “Insuper conservamus incolas oppidi Kielce, in eis libertatibus et in communitatibus quibus omnes alii subditi Ecclesiae et Episcopos, cracoviensis ab antique gaudent et potuntur” (roughly: “Moreover, we preserve the inhabitants of the town of Kielce in their rights and in their community which in all things is subject to the church and bishop of Kraków, who enjoys domain as of old”), thus due to Kielce being among religious possessions, as well as the order of an internal affairs commission dated 22 March 1834, the Ruling Council issued an order on 27 April 1843 to remove the Jews; However, by 1856 there were 101 Jews registered (and 3,639 Christians). In 1862 all the restrictions in regard to Jewish residents in the Kingdom of Poland were set aside, and then the Jewish population of Kielce began to grow rapidly, reaching 974 in 1873. The growth in Jewish population, as noted by the Governor in 1873, not only lacked negative consequences for the Christian population, but, on the contrary, because of the trading activities of the Jews, many goods were sold more cheaply. In the district [uezd] of Kielce in 1873 there were 6,526 Jews. In 1897, in the same district the population was more than 140,000, of which 18,405 were Jews, 6,399 in the city of Kielce. In places with population more than 500, Jews were represented in the greatest percentage relative to the other inhabitants. Bodzentyn, 3,350 inhabitants, 1,472 Jews; Bialagon, 970 and 378; Daleszyce, 1,987 and 270; Dąbrowa, 946 and 104; Łopuszno, 854 and 462; Promnik, 491 and 49; Słupia Nowa, 1,674 and 1,038; Suchedniów Zachodny, 559 and 418; Chęciny, 6,178 and 4,361. Manuscript sources: Materials of the Commission on Jewish Life (Saint Petersburg, 1874).

As of January 1, 1908, the Gubernia Statistical Committee determined that the number of residents of Kielce was 31,316 of which 11,264 were Jews. Among the Jews the largest number were temporary residents (54.4%), while among the Christians the majority were permanent residents (66%). Trade, concentrated primarily in the hands of the Jews, had a small business character and was limited to products of artisans and agricultural produce. From data relating to larger establishments, taken from the “List of factories and plants” published in 1910: 16 establishments, 4 Jewish; 720 workers, 112 Jewish; 800 tons of products, 110 Jewish. There were 16 doctors in the city, of which only one was Jewish; 8 bookstores, 6 Jewish; printing houses 5 and 3. There was one synagogue and 9 prayer houses. There was a Jewish section of the city hospital. In the boy’s high school there were 33 Jews out of 304 students, in the girl’s school 34 out of 203. Compare with: Results of the First All-Empire Census, Kielce Gubernia; Trudy Varshavskago Stat. Kom. (Works of the Warsaw Statistical Committee), issues 21, 32, 38; Kielce Gubernia Review; the appendix to the General Report; Calendar of Kielce Gubernia.

Kielce Gubernia is one of 10 gubernias in the Kingdom of Poland. It contains 10 cities and 33 towns (settlements). It has 761,995 inhabitants, of which 83,247 are Jews. Jews comprise 2.2% of the village population, 46.1% in cities, and 51.3% in settlements. Overall in the gubernia, Jews are 10.91% of the population. Other nationalities are represented thus: Poles 87.5%, Russians 1.049%, Germans 0.32%. Of the total population, 90.76% live in villages, only 9.24% in cities. Only 16.39% of Jews live in villages, the rest are in cities or settlements. The distribution of the Jewish population in individual cities and districts, as well as in larger towns, is given in tables 1 and 2 [see page 32]. The gender distribution of the general population (1,040 females to 1,000 males) differs from the Jewish population in that women are a larger percentage in the latter group: 1,050 females to 1,000 males. The age composition is characterized by the following figures:

Age	Jewish population	General population

demonstrating that there is a higher percentage of children and youth in the Jewish population than in the general population, but in the span between 20 and 50, i.e., working age, the percentage of Jews is noticeably lower than among the general population, which is a circumstance that is unfortunate for the Jews. The family composition of the general and Jewish populations is as follows:

	Jewish population		General population
	Male	Female	Male	Female
Unmarried	23.7%	18.6%	30.02%	25.89%
Married	71.9%	70.6%	66.42%	62.29%

Among the Jews, a larger percentage is married, notwithstanding the fact that the Jewish population is urban. This demonstrates that, in the Kielce Gubernia, the patriarchal way of life has been maintained to a significant degree.

Literacy of the general population is 25.86% for males, and 19.59% for females. This breaks down along religious confessional lines thus: Russian Orthodox males 63.85%, Russian Orthodox females 57.08%; Protestant males 47.85%, females 57.08%; Jewish males 39.52%, females 14.81%; Roman Catholic 24.27% for males, 19.25% for females; other confessions 40.56% for males, 23.08 for females. It should be noted that these data about Jewish literacy from the 1897 census are far below the actual figures. In particular for literacy in Russian, that is 16.5% for males, 6.9% for females. According to data from the Jewish community, in 1898 there were registered 181 cheders with 3,421 students (3,308 boys), of which 64 were in cities. There are 12 Jewish elementary schools. Schooling is generally not on a satisfactory level.

The professional composition of the population is given in table 3 on the verso of the map. The basic professional groups, of which there are 65 families of professions, are: 1) Agriculture, 4.7% of Jews; 2) Manufacturing - 27.9%; 3) Transportation and communications - 1.81%; 4) Trade - 48.14%; Personal services, servants, day laborers - 7.03%; 5) State and general service and liberal professions - 4.06%; 6) Non-manufacturing and undetermined professions - 6.03; 7) Armed forces - 0.32%. Trade is primarily in agricultural products and small goods. Manufacturing is chiefly crafts. Artisans comprise 10.6% of the total population in cities. Workshops are not large, averaging 2.4 persons. The most numerous are tailors, next are bootmakers. Much footwear (more than 100,000) is created by bootmakers in the city of Chęciny. In Kielce Gubernia there are about 80 Jewish factories, of which the largest (with energy plants) are 17 in number, while the remainder are small. The number of Jewish workers is 164, of which only 88 are adults. The poverty of the Jewish population can be characterized by the fact that 22.7% of Jewish families have been forced to turn for help to charities: thus, in 1898, 2,516 families asked for Passover materials. There are 16 Jewish charitable organizations in Kielce Gubernia: 2 lending houses, 1 house for foreigners, 1 society that provides clothing to the poor, 1 hospital, 10 societies for aid to the sick, 1 society to provide for poor unmarried girls. According to the 1907 survey, there was one synagogue, 30 temples, 63 prayer houses.

Radom Gubernia was established in 1844 out of Sandomierz and Kielce województwa. Out of all the inhabited places (cities and settlements), there were 49 in which there were no restrictions in the right of Jews to be residents; in 42 there existed privileges which either did not allow settlement of Jews, or confined them to a special Jewish quarter; in 33, which were in the border zone, movement of Jews into them from the interior of the district was restricted (all of these restrictions were removed in 1862). In 1867 part of the territory of the Gubernia was removed to form the renewed Gubernia of Kielce; the remaining territory was divided into seven districts (уезд = uezd): Ilża, Kożenice, Końskie, Opatów, Opoczno, Radom and Sandomierz.

According to the census of 1897, there were 814,000 residents, of which 112,239 were Jewish (including 8 Karaites; see table 1). As a portion of the total population, the Jews were: 2.4% in villages; 50.5% in settlements; 50.6% in cities; and 13.8% in the entire gubernia. The majority of the Jewish population lived in cities, 45.18%; 41.44% in settlements and 13.38% in villages. Composition by religion was 83.55% Roman Catholic, 13.78% Jewish, and 1.54% Russian Orthodox. The Jewish population was characterized by the dominance of women: 100 men for 106 women. The composition by age is shown in the following table:

According to the data of the Imperial Free Economic Society (Imperatorskoe volnoe ekonomicheskoe obshchestvo) (1894) there were: 251 cheders, 251 melamed, with 4,534 male students. The composition by profession of the Jewish population is shown in table no. 3 [see page 33]. Approximately 29,000 heads of households had 82,000 family members. For every 100 Jews, the professional breakdown was: 40.41 merchants; 32.94 manufacturers, 8.03 personal service; non-production and indetermined professions 6.86; state and public service 4.28; agriculture 3.35. According to data collected by the Jewish Colonization Society [Evreiskoe kolonizatsionnoe obshchestvo], for the 29 non-Jewish factories (13 without machinery) there were 136 Jewish (116 without machinery) with 387 Jewish workers (plus 18 in non-Jewish factories). The number of Jewish artisans, according to the data of the Jewish Colonization Society, comprised 20% of the Jewish population. The percentage of needy Jewish families was 21.7%.

Szczekociny	Marriages	1847-1865	Leah Jordan Bisel
Staszów	Births	1864	Jean-Pierre Stroweis

The vital record extracts for this issue are 1840-1865 births for Klimontów, prepared by Ronald Greene; the 1847-1865 Szczekociny marriages, prepared by Leah Jordan Bisel; and the 1864 Staszów births, prepared by Jean-Pierre Stroweis. This data has been extracted from the civil registration books in possession of the Polish State Archives, and microfilmed by the Church of Jesus Christ Latter-day Saints (LDS). These extractions include information derived directly from the original registrations on the following LDS microfilms:

- #0,809,130 Klimontów 1840-1853
- #0,809,131 Klimontów 1854-1861
- #0,809,132 Klimontów 1862-1865
- #1,199,733 Szczekociny 1847-1852, 1858-1865
- #0,588,934 Staszów 1864

There are additional microfilmed records available for all three towns.

Klimontów

This issue contains a very large set of extracts of Jewish births recorded in Klimontów, from 1840 to 1865, thanks to Ronald Greene. The earlier Klimontów Jewish births, 1826-1839, appeared in III:3 (Summer 1999), pages 31-49. Also see Ronald Greene's introductory notes on page 23 of that issue.

Klimontów, in Sandomierz powiat (district) of Radom gubernia before WWI, had a Jewish population of 2,443 in 1897, and 2,652 in 1931. The Klimontów records also include events from nearby villages, most notably Koprzywnica (1897 Jewish population of 836).

These Klimontów birth extracts also include the exact date of birth. From this you can see some delayed birth registrations, especially in the first half of 1865.

Szczekociny

Leah Jordan Bisel continues her contribution of Szczekociny data, with extracts of the marriages for 1847-1865. Note that there are no records for 1853 to 1857, either in the archives nor on microfilm. Her extracts of the birth records of Szczekociny for 1847-1866 appeared in Kielce-Radom SIG Journal IV:2 (Spring 2000), pages 47-62.

Szczekociny ("Shchekochin") was in Włoszczowa powiat (district) of Kielce gubernia before WWI, and had a pre-Holocaust Jewish population of 2,532.

As with all marriage extracts, these will be of interest to researchers from many towns, because the majority of the marriages include a bride or groom from another town in the region. Marriage partners from Lelów, Pilica, Pińczów, Wolbrom, Włoszczowa, Żarnów, and other Radom and Kielce gubernia towns appear frequently. Szczekociny was near the border with Piotrków gubernia, so there are also partners from some Piotrków gubernia towns, such as Będzin, Koniecpol and Zarki.

Staszów

We're pleased to welcome a new contributor, Jean-Pierre Stroweis, who presents extracts of the 1864 Jewish births for the city of Staszów ("Stashev") – a "new" town for us, for which we have never published any extracts. Staszów (like Klimontów) was in Sandomierz powiat of Radom gubernia, and its Jewish population in 1897 was 4,903.

While transcribing the Staszów indexes for the JRI-Poland database, Jean-Pierre noted that the birth records for the year 1864 were unindexed by the original clerk, so he created a set of full extracts of the 151 births for 1864, and donated them to the Kielce-Radom SIG for publication. Indexes for the Staszów birth, marriage and death records 1826-1836 and 1857-1865 can be found in the JRI-Poland database: <http://www.jewishgen.org/jri-pl>.

Caution

These extracts are intended to assist the researcher in selecting records that may be of use for further study. There may be errors in interpretation in these extracts, due to the uneven quality of legibility of the handwriting, the microfilming, and the condition of the microfilm itself, in addition to errors in the original record books. As always, it is prudent for the researcher, when using secondary source data such as these extracts, to examine the primary source data for final verification. It is always best for the genealogist to view the actual records pertaining to his/her family to verify the interpretation, and glean additional facts.
